Mood Statement--Seeking number five.

Cuts:

Vlad walked along the frozen river all through the night. The temperatures were consistently reaching the low 20s in midafternoon and he was enjoying the spring nighttime air. He had watched practice the last two days and smiled--well, for him it was a smile though few would have noticed it. The arms were limbering up and fastballs were making the comforting "PLOOOFFF" sound when they hit the snow encrusted catcher's mitts. When a hitter made solid contact the ice shards literally flew of the barrel of the bat, and ducking the shards kept the fielders nimble (and warmer). The newly fallen snow cushioned the slides of the runners. Perfect spring baseball.

The roster was basically set with only a few spots in contention. The turnover in the core had settled down all nine opening day starters had been on the roster last season. Tomorrow they would leave the comfortable spring training facilities of Brobdingnag and spend a couple weeks in the toughening up stages. Exhibition games in Tampa, Miami, and Cayman. The sunlight and sand can be brutal even in March he thought. Dodging the palmetto bugs in the building that Boomer called a hotel would likely have the players lose sleep, but after their early exit last season he didn't feel particularly paternalistic—Vlad himself would be staying in a private villa on the other side of the island. As he finished his walk he put the final touches in his mind for his Motivational Speech in the morning. Then he walked some more.

The speech was short. He channeled the essence from several of his lost mentors. Vince Lonbardi, Al Davis, George Steinbrenner, and Smokin' Joe. "This is a simple game—throw the ball, hit the ball, catch the ball. I opened the check book to give you the best players money can buy, now see to it you do your part. Winning isn't everything--it's the only thing. Just win, baby. Or else." That was it. Then as he left the podium each player and coach and trainer and manager was given a long narrow box wrapped in simple black satin. Inside was a pipe wrench engraved, "In Memory of Joe".

No one said Vlad was a great orator--but not one player or coach missed the message--or the threat.

Relief Philosophy: This is a very deep relief staff. Nearly 350 RH relief innings and 350 LH ones. We will have seven relievers each month, 3 closers and 4 set-up pitchers grade 10* to 16*. Three left handers, four right handers. The intent of the closers is to squash rallies, not to only automatically pitch the 8th and 9th. Generally the battle rhythm is as follows, more details next page:

Starter gets in trouble

Closer guy kills rally, hands ball to set-up guy

Set-up either gets in trouble and hands ball to a second closer, or pitches 1.7 to 2.0 innings and hands it to another set-up guy Repeat unto the 9th inning

Multiple relievers in an inning are fine; I expect most games will use 3 to 6 relievers A closer starts the 9th+ if it is a +1/+3 game, otherwise they generally don't start an inning Relievers should go no more than 1.7 to 2.0 innings per outing in most cases max, except.... Holland is the sponge with 200+ innings

Relief Staff:

The Closers: Kimbrel, Roark (no +5), Cotts. All are good, but they are different and each is a better fit for different situations. I don't care which one gets the saves.

Kimbrel: Gd 24* RH with decent peripherals.

Roark: A Gd 19* with no +5, he will give up a few more hits but he is still a 19* but his +23/+54 is a very useful tool against high walk/high power teams.

Cotts: The LH part of the triumvirate.

This means I can use a closer to kill two rallies and then still have one available for the 9th if the game is close (+1/+3). Typically they will finish the inning they come in, then hand the ball off to one of the set-up guys. Try to spread the usage among the closer.

The set-up relievers: Everyone else, including Derek Holland. There will be 2 RH and 2 LH every month so many opportunities to get the +5 in match-ups—please take advantage of this. With the +5 I should be throwing effectively a grade 18* or a very good 17* against almost every batter in a key situation of the game. Mix and match these guys to spread the usage around somewhat evenly.

Holland: He is one of the set-up crerw but also has a huge number of innings, and since every start this year will be made by a RHP he should find work in almost every game. Look for that part of your line-up, usually a run of 3 or 4 guys, that is susceptible to LHPs. If it is significant, and Holland would have a better effective grade than the starter against this stretch, then when they come up in the 4th through 7th inning strongly consider putting Holland in to face that stretch before passing it to a PHPP. This is a judgment call, and not outematic. Use good judgment considering how covers the LH shifts are how.

The Positions

CATCHER: Mauer is the man vs RHPs, with Navarro and his +10 starting against LHPs. Mauer can come in defensively late in close games. Navarro can pinch hit (see below). Both PA limited.

FIRST BASE: Chris Davis every road game. Will only come out for the very rare pinch runner.

SECOND BASE: This requires some attentive management. Whoever starts will hardly ever finish. -- vs RHP Ackley starts vs RHPs, will be PH for in most games (often Navarro), then Getz finishes. -- vs LHP Murphy starts with Getz his defensive caddy. Getz plays almost every game but rarely hits. All the secondbasemen will be PA limited/

SHORTSTOP: Ramirez vs RHPs, Cabrera vs LHPs. They have enough games, but not a lot extra and will likely be PA limited when it's all said and done. For now Cabrera can come in to play defense, but Ramirez should almost never come off the bench.

THIRD BASE: Machado every game, all game.

OUTFIELD: Rios, Trout, Werth will be the mainstays. When Young is up and he can replace Rios defensively, other than that there should be no reason to remove them. In April, Young starts while Werth is in the minors. The starters will be game limited, Dunn and Young will be PA limited.

DESIGNATED HITTER: Papi most games except April. He'll need a PRer occasionally. Dunn is the April DH. Papi will rest against some LHPs, but I'll send out individual lineups in those cases. When he is not starting, he is left sleeping in the hotel and is not available to play.

In priority order

#1: Stealing 2nd: to get the tie/winning run into scoring position: 8th inning or later, anyone with at least 5 SBA on the roster sheet and an adjusted SSN of 30+.

#2: Hit and Run: This team has a lot of obvious power but also some good H&R options. Use them aggressively, any inning where the score is +3/-3. Primary combinations are:

--Runners: Trout, Cabrera, Rios

--Hitters: Cabrera, Mauer, Ackley.

#3: Stealing 2nd in any other situation: If the score is +1 to -2, innings 4 through 8, any runner with 10+ SBA on the roster sheet and an adjusted SSN or 30+

#4: Bunting: In amongst the big lumber we do have a few small-ball folks. Cabrera, Getz, and Ackley can bunt in these situations:

--7th inning+, tie/lead run on 1st or 2nd (could have runners on both)

--No outs

--NOTE: If the runner on 2nd has adjusted SSN of 30 to steal 3rd, steal instead.

Pinch Hitting: Generally for Ackley. Occasionally for Mauer/Navarro. There may be occasions—very rarely—where the right move is to PH for Davis or Papi, but never if you can instantly counter with a RHRP. If there is any doubt about the right move I would rather have Davis/Ortiz hitting vs a LHRP than the PH going against a RHRP.

Navarro is the primary PH. Murphy can PH but should be a secondary option because of his limited PAs. When they are on the roster, Dunn and Young can PH freely. Getz can PH in blow-outs to save PAs for Murphy and then Getz plays defensively anyway.

Generally I will let Ackley get 2 PAs. On his third PA, if it is a key situation (men on, close game) you can PH if that seems the reasonable option. If you don't PH on the third PA, be a little quicker to do so on the 4th time through. It should be exceedingly rare for Ackley to get a 5th PA.

Pinch Running: This won't happen often, but when it does it will often be in conjunction with a double switch. There are only four slow runners—Davis, Ortiz, Dunn, Navarro. When one of them is the tie/win run on 1st or 2nd in the 8th+ inning consider pinch running. Getz is the primary pair of legs, though Cabrera or Murphy can PR. All three will probably be PA limited. Often if Davis comes out, Ortiz or Dunn will need to give up the DH to play 1B, so Davis will typically only leave in the 9th+.

Extra Base Advancement: Be reasonably aggressive. Apply your best judgment—especially on the computer—if you are comfortable doing so (I am comfortable with that), or use the Adams tables.

Defensive Subs: These are largely self-evident.

--Getz after someone has PH for Ackley

- --Getz for Murphy & Cabrerra for Ramirez if we have a lead from the bottom of the 5th on.
- --Young for Rios & Mauer for Navarro if we have a 1 to 4 run lead going into the home 7th+

Infield: Generally I play for the DP unless up by 3+ late in the game, and I hold all runners unless it is obvious not to.

Stretch:

-- If my pitcher is an adjusted 17- then only if tie/win run is on 3rd, 2 outs, 8th+ inning

-- If my pitcher is an adjusted 18+ then only if tie/win run is on 3rd, 1 or 2 outs, 8th+ inning

Intentional Walks: I am not the Zion-like Anti-IBB xenophobe, but I do it rarely. Only late in close games when you have a Miggy, McCutchen, etc. like guy at bat and 1B is open, and I can get a noticeable edge with my pitchers (considering my bullpen options) against your next batter (considering likely PHers)

All Else: Play it as you would for your team.
